Aging

A headline popped up on my search for something recently. It read, “10 Powerful Habits of People Who Age Well.” Considering my age and the age of many of you, I read the article. It focused on mindset, eating, activity, relationships, curiosity, and sleep. It was written by a woman who is a medical doctor. The doctor started looking at her older patients. Some were frail and some seemed to thrive in their older years. So, she studied their habits and came up with her list of habits that will keep you healthy in your golden years.

I noticed immediately that she forgot something. All her patients will eventually die. It doesn't matter if they are frail physically or quite vigorous in their golden years. She did not contemplate what happens after death. I'm reminded of two verses from Paul's letters that should be added to this doctor's list. The first is "for bodily training is just slightly beneficial, but godliness is beneficial for all things, since it holds promise for the present life and also for the life to come" (1 Timothy 4:8). Paul is not suggesting that we stop all physical exercise. He is saying that if godliness isn't present in our lives, we have no hope for the life to come. Godliness helps us in this life and the life to come. If we ignore godliness in favor of our physical state, we may be in for a surprise on the day of judgment.

The second verse is "Therefore we do not lose heart, but though our outer person is decaying, yet our inner person is being renewed day by day" (2 Corinthians 4:16). We may be losing the battle with our health, but developing our relationship with God means strengthening our certainty of entering the final state (2 Peter 1:10-11).

You already know what I've just written. So, keep doing what you've been doing. Let your light shine. Let others see what is foremost if they want life beyond this life.
